Housing Project Formed for Hamlin Veterans Under Local Financing

Plans have been completed for a 32-unit housing project for GI residents of Hamlin under a 100 per cent loan program.

It was announced Wednesday that T. E. Shelburne and Son have completed negotiations for 32 sites in the Tom Holman Addition that would permit the construction of homes for GI purchasers under this broad loan plan. Applications are now being processed for this construction.

Original plans call for erection of the houses in groups of three rotated as to floor plan until 12 have been built. The project has four basic floor plans on three elevations (fronts), which have been approved for construction of this sort. Under this design there is possibility of rotation that will eliminate monotonous duplication in any one group.

Houses will be of frame construction and will average $6,500 in cost, varying as to location of lot and choice of front. All utilities will be available and the dwellings will be ready for occupancy.

Regulations provide that the structures be fronted with curbs and sidewalks and that landscaping be performed before delivery to the purchaser. Construction of the houses will be contingent with the demand as announced by the builders.

It was also announced that subsequent houses will be built for other than veterans after priorities for that group have been filled. Financing for other than veterans will be on an 80 per cent loan basis.

Pipers Ousted In Abilene Tourney To Close Season

Hamlin's Pied Pipers had to be content with the loser's role in the district basketball tournament played in the Abilene high school gymnasium Thursday, Friday and Saturday.

Pressure of tournament competion with little experience in that type of play, caused the local five to play far below their form of the season and they were defeated in straight games. Roscoe was drawn as first oponent for the Pipers and continued their "hot" play with which they closed on the leaders in their half of the circuit.

Throckmorton proved to be the better pressure club in the sudden death afterpiece which was played to determine which of the aggregations would be eliminated.

Thus the finals resolved themselves into a contest between the Merkel team and Roscoe and Merkel left the court with their first championship in that department of athletics.

All-District 6-A team selected from tournament performances, named Don Rowland and Joe Allen Dean of Hamlin on the all-star group.

Members of the team have hung up their uniforms and are now training for the track season soon to open in the district.

Survey Conducted For National Guard Company in Hamlin

Captain R. E. Vail, instructor, 3rd Batallion 142nd Infantry Regiment, 36th Division, was in Hamlin Wednesday in the interests of formation of a national guard unit for this area.

Captain Vail is an instructor in the Abilene unit listed above.

It has been found necessary to move the guard unit from San Angelo and Hamlin is among the communities being considered for relocation of this company.

The guard company would require an enrollment of approximately fifty men and would provide military training for young men of the community without the necessity of leaving Hamlin.

An effort is being made to interest Hamlin individuals who have had sufficient experience to command in the formation of this group.

Farm Census Will Cover More Than Fifty Rural Crops

The 1950 Census of Agriculture questionnaire, to whichJones County farmers will supply answers in April, 1950, will list more than 50 field orchard, and truck crops. However, no one farmer, will be required to answer inquiries for all of the crops listed. Usually, an individual farmer will need to report only four or five different crops.

It is pointed out by Bill Lehmberg, Jones County agricultural agent, that while the Census Bureau's questionnaire provides for reporting each kind of crop produced in this section of the country in 1949, only a small proportion of the crop section of the questionnaire will apply to any one farm. The same is true for inquiries on livestock production, poultry and poultry production, and dairy products.

Under a new procedure adopted by the Bureau of the Census, the 1950 agriculture questionnaire varies for each state or group of states. Inquiries on crops and on classes of livestock and other farm products are limited to those crops common to each state or group of states Thus the questionnaire used in a northern state would not include inquiries about cotton or citrus fruit production, nor will a form used in a Southern state have questions about maple syrup.

Installation of approximately 200 meters will be completed this week on Central Avenue and arteries in the downtown section converging on that street.

Meters are being installed under the direction of E. C. Barnes, engineer of the Duncan Meter Co., contractors for the equipment. The meters are of the dual type which will accept either pennies or nickels, according to the estimated period of parking. Registers will accomodate 10 pennies or two nickels. Pennies will permit 12 minute parking each and nickels, one hour each.

Under contract with the company the city will be entitled to full instruction in operation of the meters and servicing by city employees. Additional meters may be installed at a later date.

City ordinance as adopted for use of the meters in Hamlin outlines parking regulations that will govern the metered areas.

Present plans call for the meters to go into use Monday morning and a careful study of the penalties involved in use is urged by the city administration.

Lieniency in penalizing citizens is the keynote of initial use of the meters and provisions have been made for parking violators to take advantage of early payment of penalties. It is believed by the governing group that the installation of these units on the streets of Hamlin will greatly reduce the congested condition of streets as now exisits without parking restriction.

Administration spokesmen urge that patience be exercised by citizens and that opinions be reserved until the meters have had a thorough trial.

Lions Schedule Show In New Fund Drive

Preliminary work has begun by Hamlin Lions Club for the staging of a Womanless Wedding which has been scheduled for presentation in Hamlin early in March.

Tentative plans call for each member of the club to contribute his part in the entertainment and collective heads are planning a series of stunts in conjunction with the main production that will afford fun in quantity.

General outline of the program is to be under the head of B. V. Newberry and committees incidental to presentation of the show will function at their appointed tasks.

No program was presented at the regular meeting of the club at Johnson's Drive In Tuesday and the principal portion of the luncheon hour was devoted to discussion of plans for the wedding show. A move was made to purchase a new flag to replace the damaged banner now in use at the meeting place. Cooperation of Hamlin Rotary Club will be asked in this replacement.

Mrs. M. Y. Wilson and brother, J. E. Patterson left Saturday for Denton where they will be accompanied by Mrs. M. Y. Wilson Jr., and daughter, Patsy, to Louisville, Kentucky to attend the reburial and funeral of 2nd-Lt. M. Y. Wilson Jr.

ELEMENT OF TIME

(A Short Story)

By RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

WESLEY CURSED the train because it was delayed at Ashville Junction. He cursed the telephone, because there was a delay in getting his call through. But when at last he heard Prue's voice, the heat went out of him.

"Hello, darling! I'll be an hour late in arriving. A cow on the track, or something . . . It's going to be marvelous seeing you again."

"Call me the minute you get in at the office."

The train was an hour and twelve minutes late getting in to Millbanks. Wesley went immediately into the station and called Prue. She would be through work in an hour; would he meet her in the lobby of the Buckingham?

Outside the station Wesley saw Tony Metcalf. He was glad to see anyone that he knew, after being away so long.

"That's right. What's on your mind?"

"How are things, Tony? It's good seeing you again."

"Back in the big town again, eh? Suppose you're heading for the Buckingham. I'll walk along with you, if you don't mind going by way of Pleasant street. I have an errand to do."

If there were anything strange in Tony's manner, Wes didn't notice it. He was too excited over the prospect of seeing Prue. When he met her at the Buckingham she seemed lovelier than ever. They had dinner at the hotel, then went into the "Prue has turned me down in favor of Wes Holmes. Best of luck to them both, though it came as a shock, for I loved her greatly . . . Met Holmes at the 4 o'clock train tonight and walked up the hill with him. He really is a nice chap. When I asked him about Rose he begged me not to tell Prue. Well, why should I?"

Wes was stunned. He looked at Prue. Prue said "I didn't want to upset you by telling you about him, darling. It was nothing. I thought he was merely being friendly. When I found out differently I told him we'd have to stop seeing each other. I met him for lunch today."

"The diary," said Capt. Bullard, "was found in Metcalf's pocket. His body was discovered an hour ago in the park—shot. One of your gloves was also found there, Holmes. Now, the fact that you asked Metcalf not to mention to Miss Fuller about Rose—"

"Rose? Rose who?" cried Wes. "I don't know any Rose, never heard of a girl by that name."

Capt. Bullard looked unconvinced.

"You did walk up the hill with Metcalf this afternoon?"

"Yes. He was at the station. Neither one of us mentioned Prue."

"What did you talk about?"

"Look here." Wes cried wildly, "this is all nonsense. I tell you you're crazy."

"Just a minute, Captain," Prue said. Prue's lips were white, but the startled, horrified look had left her eyes. "Was your medical examiner able to determine the approximate time of Tony's death?"

"He died at about 5:45, if it makes any difference."

"It does. It makes this difference: Tony committed suicide, but was clever enough to make it appear as though Wes had murdered him. He didn't want either of us to be happy. He told me that this noon. After lunch he must have gone and written those things in his diary as he expected and planned them to happen."

Try Smiling.

When the weather suits you not,
Try Smiling.
When yor coffee isn't hot,
Try smiling.
When your neighbors won't do right.
Or yor relatives all fight,
Sure 'tis hard but then you might,
Try Smiling.
Doesn't change things of course,

But it cannot make them worse,

And it seems to help your case
Brightens up a gloomy place
Then, it sorta' rests your face

Drugs Keep Pace In Race Against Dread Diseases

In the last few years, many of us have read and heard a great deal about streptomycin, a newly developed drug derived from a soil fungus. Streptomycin and its derivative, dihydrostreptomycin, have thus far shown much promise in the treatment of certain diseases, particularly some forms of tuberculosis.

Streptomycin is the drug which shows the greatest promise of any drug yet used in tuberculosis treatment, but it is not a "cure-all" and it has certain limitations. It is not a specific cure for tuberculosis, but rather a valuable adjunct to other forms of treatment for certain types of tuberculosis. When used, it is always a part of the whole program of treatment and should be given only under strict medical supervision.

Streptomycin has been used with particular success in military tuberculosis and tuberculous meningitis—forms of the disease which until streptomycin was discovered were almost invariably fatal. Even with these forms of the disease, however, recovery is not always absolutely certain following streptomycin treatment.

There are certain handicaps to using streptomycin. One is the fact that the tuberculosis germs of the patient receiving the drug frequently devolop resistance to it and the drug then loses its effectiveness. Another handicap of streptomycin is the toxic reaction it causes in some patients, such as disturbance of equilibrium.

Dihydrostrepmycin, which has been in use for the past year and a half, appears to be less toxic than the parent drug. Studies are also being made to determine the dosage of streptomycin which will cause the least toxic effects.

Streptomycin cannot be considered a substitute for other proved forms of treatment for tuberculous patients. It will not effect a "cure" for tuberculosis. To date, there is no such thing as a miracle drug" which constitutes a specific quick cure for tuberculosis, but streptomycin is the most effective drug known today in tuberculosis treatment.

QUESTIONS and ANSWERS

Q—Will I have to go to VA for advisement and guidance in the event I wish to change my educational course under the GI Bill?

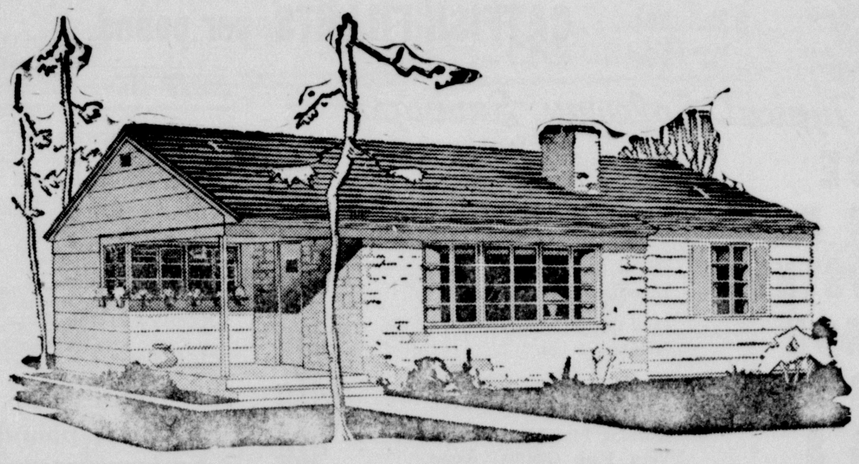

A—To avoid possible delays, a veteran seeking to make his first change of course may go to his school for counseling service. If the school has no organized counseling service or if the student seeks to make further changes in his course after the initial change, he must go to VA for advisement and guidance.

Cold Treatment Listed As Necessary in Early Stages for Control

There is hardly anyone who hasn't caught cold at one time or another and besides making you feel miserable they steal your time and money, declared, Dr. George W. Cox, state health officer early this week in a report to The Herald.

They fool you too, because the early stages are often the same as those of more serious illnesses.

Long continued colds may pave the way for an attack of pneumonia, tuberculosis, or a chronic infection of the nose, throat, ears or sinuses. Do your best to keep from catching cold. If you do catch one, take care of it promptly by going to bed, keep warm and dry, drink plenty of citrus juices and water. If the cold is severe, consult your physician.

Another enemy is pneumonia, an acute infection of the lungs.

Virus pneumonia is the most common of all pneumonia today. It may occur at any age, and usually appears in local outbreaks instead of far reaching epidemics. In any case of pneumonia, good medical care and nursing play a great role in recovery.

Lobar pneumonia is caused by a bacteria, not a virus, and is very contagious. A generation ago one out of every four who had this disease died. Today thanks to the "miracle drugs" a great many are saved. It is most common in late winter an dearly spring.

The most frequent victims of broncho-pneumonia are the aged, the invalid and the baby.

KING AND QUEEN . . . Art Devlin, member of ski-jumping team, and Eileen Seigh, member of U. S. Olympic skating team of 1948, were selected king and queen of Lake Placid's winter sport carnival. She is also a member of a professional ice show.

Governor Shivers Reports on Need Of Omnibus Tax for State Institutions

By Allen Shivers

The Texas legislature, now in special session at the governor's call, is showing a laudable inclination to pitch in and solve the state hospital problem.

Legislators differ, of course, as to the best way to do it. That is natural, and a desirable feature of our democratic system. The important thing is to arrive at a solution so the state hospitals and other institutions for sick and handicapped Texans will not suffer from lack of funds.

As explained in two earlier articles, the legislature must (1) appropriate operating funds for the fiscal year starting Sept. 1, 195o, (2) make some start on a badly needed building program at these institutions and (3) find the money with which to do these necessary things. The cost is estimated at $26,000,000.

I have explained that an anticipated $26,000,000 deficit in the to appropriate from that fund at general fund makes it impossible this time. It also casts great doubt upon the possibility that the legislature can cut enough out of current expenditures to make up the deficit and free any money for the hospitals. And under the constitution, the deficit would have to be covered before any money from general revenue could be spent on the hospital program.

As explained in the second article, we now spend 90 cents of each state dollar on three things: schools, roads, public welfare. It would be impossivble to cut back present spending to the required point without dipping heavly into some or all of those three appropriations. The question then is, do the people of Texas want the school, rural road and old age assistance programs curtailed?

Assuming that they do not, the legislature would have to supply additional revenue to foot the hospital bills.

The only other possibility would be to vote, by four-fifths majority in each house, to let another $26,000,000 be added to the deficit we are expected to face next year. The legislature has indicated no definite desire to do that.

My own views on the emergency and the most practical solution were given to the legislature in part as follows:

"Having called this emergency session, I think I ought to have the courage to share with you the responsibility for resolving the emergency.

"Therefore, I earnestly recommend to you the following program:

"1. That you give immediate and sympathetic consideration to those requests for funds to operate our state hospitals, special schools and correctional institutions and to start the building program making adequate appro priations of these purposes; and that you finance these appropriations by levying a special additional tax upon the broad base that now provides revenues for the so-called omnibus tax fund. The tax to raise the operating funds should be a temporary tax expiring with the emergency. This would mean an additional levy upon such items as oil and gas, sulphur and whiskey, beer and wine, cosmetics and playing cards, automobiles and cigarettes, carbon black, radios and cement, insurance companies, telephone companies and utilities.

"2. That you give the same urgent consideration to the board's recommendation for a long range building program.

"3. That the income from these special levies be placed in a special fund or funds, to be used for the sole and exclusive purpose of financing these necessary programs.

"The tax proposed is a broad-based tax which spreads as widely and as fairly as possible the common burden of our common problem and common duty. Obviously I think it is the most practical and desirable plan under the circumstances or I would not recommend it to you. Frankly. I can think of no other cause or purpose for which I would suggest the levying of additional taxes at this time.

"I have given you my idea. I welcome yours. Let's work together with wholehearted application to the problem . . .

"Quick action on this emergency matter will have another desirable effect — it will leave us time, perhaps, to re-examine our financial commitments and effect any economies that the legislature, in its wisdom, might deem possible. Oour first duty is to those who are under our care and on our conscience. When that duty has been discharged, we can and should consider every reasonable possibility of achieving economy. I want to stress again that such savings will decrease the general fund deficit but, because of that deficit, can hardly be expected to benefit the hospital program.

"Time is precious. This is a 30-day session, and the people of Texas will rightfully expect us to take appropriate final action within that period."

Of one thing I am very sure — the people of Texas want their friends and neighbors cared for properly and cured if possible when they are so unfortunate as to have to be placed in a mental or other state institution.

In the parlor, blushing beaux and patient visitors "saw the world" with the stereoscope.

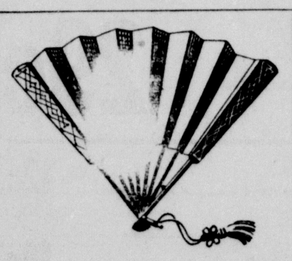

What one thing made these old-fashioned?

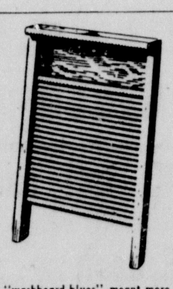

You're right if your answer is "cheap electricity." Part of the miracle of electric service today is its low cost.

You've helped make electricity inexpensive by using it for more and more jobs. So have the men and women who operate your business-managed electric company. They long ago foresaw the need for low-cost electric service.

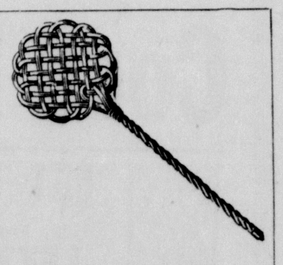

Their skills, and experience, and sound business methods have made it today's best buy. What else can you buy that costs so little—and does so much?

Roger Q. Garrett Seeking Reelection As County Judge

To the People of Jones County:
Friends: I want to express my thanks to you for all your favors, counsel, guidance and help you have given me as your county judge, and for what you have done for our county, as our local government is what all of us people make it.

I am deeply grateful for the honor you bestowed upon me when you overwhelmingly elected me your county judge; it is a position which I consider to be one of trust and confidence.

I am asking for this position again, because I really want to continue to serve you as your county judge. I plan to see as many of you personally as possible, but please consider this an earnest and sincere solicitation of your vote and influence if by chance I fail to see you personally.

My only promise is that I will try to serve you to the best of my agility as the many and various problems arise. If you choose to reelect me, I hope to serve you in such a manner that when you judge me by my acts, you will be more than satisfied with the confidence you placed in me.
—Roger Q. Garrett.

Fertility Must Be Natural for Right Pecan Production

Pecans require a fertile soil. On soils that lack natural fertile, growth can be encouraged by the use of commercial fertilizers. Fertilizers that have been used most commonly are those of the 5-10-5 and 8-8-8 grades, so states Bill Lehmberg, Jones County Agent.

For young trees ,the amount of 5-10-5 or 8-8-8 to use per tree should be one to two pounds per inch of diameter of the trunk of the tree. The fertilizer should be broadcast in early spring (early March) over the ground area in a band extending from near the body of the tree to the end of the branches or extending slightly beyond. The heaviest application should be toward the end of the branches. The fertilizer should be worked in with a hoe or fork to a depth of three or four inches. A supplementary application of ammonium nitrate will greatly stimulate growth. The amount of ammonium nitrate to use is one pound per year of age of the tree to five years of age.

This material may be applied in May in the same manner or suggested for 5-10-5 or 8-8-8.

Well rotted barnyard manure, if available, is also frequently used for trees. The manure should be applied in early spring. Only well rotted manure should be used. In addition to the plant food material supplied by manure, it also improves the aeration and moisture holding capacity of the soil.

The ideal pecan soil is fertile, well drained, deep and pervious to water. But, you can still grow a beautiful and productive tree on soils that are slightly deficient in fertility by the correct use of commercial fertilizers.

HIS OWN FEET

(A Short Story)

By RICHARD HILL WILKINSON

BIT BY BIT, Myles came to know something of Irma's past life. Not through voluntary and direct mention of it on her part. The opposite was, in fact, more the case. She spoke little of what had happened during the years before she met Myles. But occasionally, a remark was dropped, there were responses and reactions which enabled him to build in his own mind a fairly accurate picture.

There had been tragedy in the girl's life. Difficulties, struggle, sadness. She was quite alone in the world, a little afraid, craving security. Myles sensed that in her love for him she had satisfied that craving. It was this that aroused in him the first suggestion of a doubt. She needed, wanted protection and a sympathetic and helpful friend. Without him, or somebody, she would always be afraid, always a trifle self-conscious.

At the time of their first meeting his feeling had been one of exuberance, of glamour and romance, of love at first sight and success at having found at last the one girl in the world that he wanted and needed. Even now, without her, he realized he would be unhappy; and yet his happiness was not complete.

". . .And so you see," he finished a half hour later, "it's something of a problem. I shudder at the thought of investing myself with that responsibility, with always feeling apologetic for her, always trying to spare her embarrassments. And yet I love the girl."

Palmer was silent for a long while. "It's difficult for me to advise you, Myles. I'm a married man and those things aren't quite as important to me any more. Other things have taken their place. I hope you get my meaning."

Myles did not answer at once. They had turned back toward the house, had started up the walk that led from beach to veranda, and stopped behind a clump of shrubbery near the porch's end. It was impossible to close their ears to what Irma was saying without betraying their own presence, and Myles was suddenly anxious not to accomplish this feat.

"—that's why," Irma was saying, "I'm glad of this opportunity to talk to you alone, Kay. You and Palmer are Myles' best friends and—I've been wanting to talk to you about him for ever so long. It's nothing, I suppose, only I do love him, would be completely happy with him except that—well, doesn't it strike you that he's too self-conscious, too afraid of hurting someone else's feelings? He seems always afraid of asserting himself, of standing on his two feet. Why, I actually find myself being careful to spare him embarrassments, if you know what I mean."

In the dim light Myles turned to face his friend. There were glints of anger in his eyes. "Ex-
